

GUIDE TO

FINANCIAL ABUSE

The vision of the Surrey Safeguarding Adults Board is that all adults in Surrey live a life free from fear, abuse and neglect.

WHAT IS FINANCIAL ABUSE?

Financial abuse typically means cheating someone out of their money, possessions or property – or using their money, possessions or property without their informed consent.

People with care and support needs – such as mental illness, learning or physical disabilities, or dementia – may be more at risk of financial abuse than others. Elderly people are particularly at risk, and on occasion the person committing the financial abuse may be a trusted caregiver or family member. Within a family context, financial abuse is also a form of domestic abuse.

WHAT ARE THE DIFFERENT TYPES OF FINANCIAL ABUSE?

There are many kinds of financial abuse, and it can happen at home, in a care setting or even in a public place.

Common examples include:

- » Bank and credit card fraud
- » Theft
- » Controlling or withholding access to money
- » Pressuring someone to change their will
- » Pressuring someone to sign something they don't want to or can't understand
- » Forged signatures on documents
- » Misuse of property, possessions or money
- » Misuse of power of attorney

SPOTTING THE SIGNS OF FINANCIAL ABUSE

Whether the incident is minor or major, a one-off or a continuing pattern, financial abuse is a crime and should be dealt with straight away.

Be on the lookout for:

- » Unexplained withdrawals or unusual activity in a bank account
- » Sudden shortage of money
- » Inability to pay bills or buy food
- » Possessions or cash going missing
- » Poor living conditions that are incompatible with a person's normal income
- » A carer or family member showing unusual interest in a person's finances or assets
- » Unexpected or sudden changes to a will, policy, property title or power of attorney
